

LA Patchwork: Final Draft

I believe in technology. I believe in how technology will eventually save people, how technology will have a great impact on people's daily lives. Technology evolves from time to time, and I believe that not long after, people will begin to take technology for granted. Technology is what I use and rely on everyday, and sometimes, even I take it for granted, but technology is a must have in the modern world, and I feel that people should be blessed when using it.

Nowadays, when you stand in a bus or train, you will see people using their iPhones, or listening to their iPods. More and more people are using touch screen phones instead of normal phones with keys to press. So why are people using such a high technology phone instead of just normal phones and why are these gadgets even made, when normal phones are enough to satisfy the purpose of hand phones? Such a high technology gadget are being made and used because people want access to Internet and listen to high quality music wherever they go. They find iPhones much easier to use and handle, and the applications are enough to satisfy them. This shows how technology evolves as time passes because people demands more and more from it.

Also, if you say that you do not have a computer, then you will be the odd one out, because everyone else will have a computer. People need a computer or a laptop to do their work, and some schools even need students to purchase their own laptops. Even now in my current school, some classes had already started using Ipad as the main studying material, which will basically take over the usual pen and paper system. Personally, I think that people without computers will be at a great disadvantage when they are at work. If printers were not invented and typewriters still exist, how will the students or adults keep up with the workload in modern society, when competitions are everywhere? Acknowledging these facts, I can feel that technology had already become part of people's daily lives, and also, do people really appreciate the technology they are given?

Once, I asked my niece what she will do without technology, and without thinking, she replied, " Nothing, I'll just continue the way I am now, I do not mind not having a hand phone." I got really surprised, so I asked her again, " So you do not mind not having a computer, air conditioner, iPod and telephone?", but this time, she seems shocked, and immediately said, " Oh! I nearly forgot! I cannot do anything without a computer, and I could not survive without an iPod!" Her reply really got me thinking, are people now starting to take technology for granted?

However, there was also once which I took technology for granted. I was using my computer and there was a show I really wanted to watch. I started loading it, and after a few minutes, it still could not load. At that time, I felt really annoyed with the computer, but at the same time, I felt that I was a bit too impatient. I recalled the times when my computer was really fast, and I could get things done within seconds, because of the new advanced technology in the computer. Slowly, I began to realise how lucky I am to even get this high technology gadget.

Technology evolves in order to meet up to the high expectations of people, and now, technology is a must have in the society. Without technology, people will not be able to accomplish any masterpieces. People rely on technology to do all sorts of things, and always thinking that technology will be there for them when they need it and took it for granted. Without technology, everything will be held back, and nothing can be done, so I think that people should be grateful to the technology they have and not complain about it. I believe in technology, I believe that technology should not be taken for granted. This I believe.
